

Golden Rule

Downstait

One night I met a girl, I never got her name
She said she might take me home if I bought her a drink
The night went on and on, I thought I'd left her mind
But when she called a cab, she pulled me inside

She started getting naked
Climbed on me and said
She's already got a man
But I'm already in her bed

Oh, no, here we go,
She heard my song on the radio
I don't know your name
And if it's all the same
She came inside, she went for a ride
And then she told me that she loved me
And I said that that was cool
But I won't break the golden rule

I woke up all alone, ashamed of what I did
She walked into the room, just wearing my jacket
She closed the shades again, I heard her lock the door
She turned around to say, "I know you want some more"

She's already naked
I just heard what she said
She's still got a man
But he's not the one in her bed

Oh, no, here we go,
She heard my song on the radio
I don't know your name
And if it's all the same
She came inside, she went for a ride
And then she told me that she loved me
And I said that that was cool
But I won't break the golden rule

Same night, with a different girl
Quick escape from a simple world
Everything she thought she knew
Forgot about it all
Got up 'cause I had to pack
Grabbed my arm tried to hold me back
I didn't hear a word she said
'Cause I was already in her bed

Oh, no, here we go,
She heard my song on the radio
I don't know your name
And if it's all the same
She came inside, she went for a ride
And then she told me that she loved me
And I said that that was cool
But I won't break the golden rule
