Attracted To Pain

Earl Thomas Conley

In solemn response, to your wishes and wants I stand with my heart in my hands Though the courage it takes to live with mistakes Makes me feel less than a man Because girl you're the beat that robs me of sleep By keeping my face in the rain But how can I rest, when your love's the test That leaves me with no one to blame And proves I'm attracted to pain

Unintentional pain Like a continual rain that's falling Down on me

So with helpless consent I pay for the rent On a room where we hide in the dark From a woman and child whose love is on trial By a man who once swore on his heart That only in death would they part

But unintentional pain keeps calling Like a continaul rain that's falling Down on me Down on me Down on me Down on me
