

Into a Sea Of Souls

Edenbridge

Cold, dark
silence at night
feel, seclusion
in the absence of light

bygone, so hopeless
in this solitary shell
seamless, painless
too late to bid you farewell

there comes a light
a cone of rays
and when the last bell tolls homeward bound am I
leave an angry sky
into a sea of souls

out of the mortal remains so strange, so bizarre
all just illusion ?
Watching me from afar

my perception
crossing the great divide life hereafter
to the other side

I see a light
a cone of rays
and when the last bell tolls
homeward bound am I
leave an angry sky
into a sea of souls
they wait for me
as I arrive
and when the last bell tolls
i leave the world terrine on to fields divine
into the sea of souls

now it's done, I am there time is out of joint now, I am here to understand all is to forgive all this eternal sea of light