The Weight of the World

Editors

Keep a light on those you love They will be there when you die Baby, there's no need to fear Baby, there's no need to cry

Every little piece in your life Will add up to one Every little piece in your life Well, it means something to someone

You've fused my broken bones Back together and then Lift the weight of the world From my shoulders again

Every little piece in your life Will add up to one Every little piece in your life It will mean something to someone

Every little piece in your life Will add up to one Every little piece of your life Will mean something to someone

You touch my face Scarred with spurs in my ear There are tears in my eyes Love replaces fear

Touch my face Scarred with spurs in my ear There are tears in my eyes Love replaces fear, fear

Every little piece in your life Will add up to one
Every little piece in your life Will mean something to someone

Every little piece in your life Will add up to one
Every little piece of your life Will mean something to someone