

Broke Down Hearted Wonderland

Edwin McCain

There used to be laughter and wide-eyes
Yellow balloons taking to the skies
Life on the high wire can only come down
And I landed in a ghost town

Shut the gates and lost the keys
There were just too many memories
And those footprints in the sand
Oh my broke down hearted wonderland

And you were a dreamer who no-one could see
A ring of fire when you looked at me
You swear you could hear the ferris wheel song
And a mile of lights trying to figure on

All and soon i heard them too
And realised that only you could ever understand
My broke down hearted wonderland
The moment that you took my hand
You made me feel like the young daring man
Broke down hearted wonderland

Welcome home to the town you used to be
And bring your laughter your wide-eyes
And give it free to
My broke down hearted wonderland
The moment that you took my hand
You made me feel like the daring young man
The broke down hearted wonderland
Broke down hearted
Oh broke down hearted
Oh broke down hearted
Broke down hearted wonderland

(yellow balloons *taking* to the skies is wrong, couldn't figure out what it said)
