

Something Yellow

Eloy

One day when you wake up in the morning
You'll never forget that day
You feel that there is something in the air
You'd never seen before
Something tough, something yellow
And your lungs begin to melt
During chimneys smoking everywhere
And you break down in the street
You hear the voice of your president
We must do something against the smog