

All Through the Years

Erasure

Longing to sail on
Through the night to the stars
On until sunrise
Where the moon hides her tears
All through the years

If I could see the world through someone else's eyes
If I could see through you would I cast you to one side
And if you gave it all would I throw it all away
Like the leaves in autumn winds

From the window in the kitchen
To the fireside by the chair
Sat in familiar surroundings, warm night air
Under the bridges that were burning
Before we reached the other side
All the feelings I remember, I cannot hide
Not for want of trying

And if you held me here would the moment fade away
Into obscurity like the night becomes the day
For all the broken promises tell me where do I begin
To throw my caution to the wind

From the window in the kitchen
To the fireside by the chair
Sat in familiar surroundings, warm night air
Under the bridges that were burning
Before we reached the other side
All the feelings I remember, I cannot hide
Not for want of trying

From the window in the kitchen
To the fireside by the chair
Sat in familiar surroundings, warm night air
Under the bridges that were burning
Before we reached the other side
All the feelings I remember, I cannot hide
Not for want of trying

Longing to sail on
Through the night to the stars
On until sunrise
Where the moon hides her tears

Longing to sail on
Through the night to the stars
On until sunrise
Where the moon hides her tears

Longing to sail on
Through the night to the stars
On until sunrise
Where the moon hides her tears
All through the years

All through the years

All through the years
All through the years
All through the years
All through the years
All through the years
All through the years
