strung by vein to running mouth your whispers are the catalyst somebody please breath lies my blood's not thick enough I can't hear my heart beat when you shut up still waiting for last rites still waiting on a goodbye kiss to sever the dead flesh and walk away a part of you please don't tell me you're useless with threaded lip my hands went numb to feel like you I should have known you were no angel by the way you said my name I'm running out of perfect moments I've grown tired of clothing the blood to whom it may concern you'll never keep my scars from healing you'll never le ave my bridges burning consciousness comes and goes like the routine of three lost words lovers lay dead and when you're bound and gagged I defy y ou to define me it's the only way to feel like I'm still breathing I long for fresh air cleansed of sedition the waters listen closer that I tell them everything then take a deep breath