

You Are Now Manually Breathing

Everyone Dies In Utah

I may walk slow but I'll never walk backwards

Be honest with yourself
You never expected much from me
But how could I blame you
How could you have faith in me
I never had faith in myself
The times have changed
I won't let this get in the way
No, not anymore
It's not the man I am

I may walk slowly but I'll never walk backwards
Progress is not how much you know
It's how much of what you've learned has changed you
We're all not the same

Everything that I've done to get to this point won't be forgotten
From the debts that I've paid
And the scars that I've made
With my legacy laid
I will never die

What makes you think you've already won
I don't go down so easily
Despite what you may think this might not end so peacefully
I'll take the hand that I've been dealt
And with everything that I've got, I'll persevere

I may walk slowly but I'll never walk backwards
Progress is not how much you know
It's how much of what you've learned has changed you
We're all not the same

Everything that I've done to get to this point won't be forgotten
From the debts that I've paid
And the scars that I've made
With my legacy laid
I will never die

I'll strive forward
Until my dying breath
I'll never stop
Until I've reached the end
I may walk slow but I'll never walk backwards
This is all I am

I may walk slowly but I'll never walk backwards
Progress is not how much you know
It's how much of what you've learned has changed you
We're all not the same

Everything that I've done to get to this point won't be forgotten
From the debts that I've paid
And the scars that I've made
With my legacy laid
I will never die
