

Hey Girl

Fair Warning

A quarter to three - as the wind's rattling down at the door

She's lying awake

Just like so many hours before

And out there a grey day will dawn - and somehow the night's gone by

It seems she lost count of the sad days

That make up her life.

Hey girl, don't you cry - time is on your side

Deep in your heart - love just might take a while

Hey girl, don't you know - you're strong and beautiful when you smile

Rain's pouring down - as she's making her way cross the square

There's faces she knows - but it seems as if no one would care

And sometimes at night when she's home - and all of her dreams fly by

It seems as if nothing will change

'Til the day that she dies

(*)Hey girl, don't you cry - time is on your side

Trust in your heart - there's so many ways to try

Hey girl, don't you know - you're strong and beautiful

When you smile - when you smile
