

Annwyn, Beneath The Waves

Faith and the Muse

Here, thoughts cling airborne To a sea of voice so glorious; me mesmerizing

This is my body; this is my inner mind; What lies beneath my eyes

Discarded years of elemental faith Beckoned to a watery embrace with love upon his face

My appetite's unchanged

Sink into dream: these enchanted depths The realm of muted wisdom

Slowly descend; trust ignites the darkness And bliss is this drowning moment

Believe me I am sorry To charm with bitter eyes; mesmerizing

Careless magic turns upon itself, washed down in ritual

Your coin and prayer can't feed the wishing well

The silence glistens on my skin; the water urges charity

I crave a grander offering My appetite's unchanged

Here I remain This is my body; this sea my inner mind

Find comfort in my arms Winds beckon above the surface; storms wane forsaken

My gaze is baptism; mesmerizing

Come to me Greet me with open arms Mesmerizing
