

Cataracts

Fallstar

You could tell I want you, I paint my life, / With a heart so big, you can clearly see. / You want a man like me, I please myself, / It's like the sound of church bells running out from me.
/ Set off a restless sound.

I saw these bodies walking the field where I once walked, / Their hands are bound, their eyes are covered. / I see them move, /
They are shattering across time, / Waiting in vain for life to find them.

And all I wanted is truth, / And all I wanted is something that I could hold onto. / And I'll hold you close, / Cause I'd been searching for so long till I found you. / Till I found you.

And I was sick, my guilt, it pinned me to the floor, / Forced my uglyness out like vomit. / And I was scared, I felt like I'm so neglectable. / A piece of me, like scars cover vultures.

My eyes tell me no lies, while my senses fail me. / My bones,
remember how they shaked? / And I'm never going back.

And all I wanted is truth, / And all I wanted is something that I could hold onto. / And I'll hold you close, / Cause I'd been searching for so long till I found you.

My eyes tell me no lies, while my senses fail me. / My bones, remember how they shaked? / And I'm never going back. / My eyes give me no lies, while my senses fail me. / My bones, remember how they used to shake? / And I'm never going back. / My bones, remember how they used to shake? / And I'm never going back. / Never going back...
