

Unmitigated Gall

Faron Young

Well, how can you have the unmitigated gall
To come back now, expecting me to fall?
Right down on my knees and kiss your feet, yeah feet
Feet that one day went a walking out on me
With a fast talking slob you hardly knew his name
Your mind is de-arranged

And where did you get the backbone and grit
To come back now, expecting me to fit?
Right back into plans that we once made
Plans that now are gone forever to return never, ever
I don't want you anymore, so get away from my door

And let me live, live, live, and let me live, live, live
Don't come messin' up my life again
How can you have the courage and the nerve
To come back now, expecting me to love you
After the way that you've done me?

Guess you think that I'm a fool
But you're the one that's blew their cool
I don't need you anymore, so get away from my door

And let me live, live, live, and let me live, live, live
Don't come messin' up my life again
How can you have the courage and the nerve
To come back now expecting me to love you
After the way that you've done me?

Guess you think that I'm a fool
But you're the one that's blew their cool
I don't need you anymore, so get away from my door
And let me live, live, live, and let me live, live, live
