Goodbye

Digging a hole down in your room I watched you disappear too young, too soon And you run out of stories to keep them entertained All of the vampires forgot your name

You forgot why you came here today And so you ran away I said, bye bye When the world has passed you by I will never forget your name, do you know why?

Millions of people know what you did But when it hit you, you ran and hid From the money and muscle rules of the game They bought your face boy, they bought your name

You forgot why you came here today And so you ran away I said, bye bye When the world has passed you by I will never forget your name, do you know why?

You forgot why you came here today And so you ran away I said, bye bye When the world has passed you by I will never forget your name, do you know why? Why?

I said, bye bye bye When the world has passed you by I will never forget your name, do you know why?
