

The Prince: Diamond Dust And Crimson Reign

Fearless Vampire Killers

We meet at dusk outside the Manse Du Mirroir
The Duke of Hearts arrives and through the looking glass we See the city right before our eyes
And in the palace husk I sense your heartbeat

And I would offer every breath of life I've claimed
To have met you on some other day
In some other world
But these thoughts are only
Diamond dust, washed out by crimson rain

Now over streets we sweep with vengeful war cries
The shadows blind to us matt black against onyx skies
And with teeth like blades I enter stage
And so we dance our dance, this fang ballet

But I would offer every breath of life I've claimed
To have met you on some other day
In some other world
But these thoughts are only
Diamond dust, washed out by crimson rain

But I am here
And you are there
And all the world's between us
And as I tare
Through bodies so repulsive
Feelings, recollections of Kissing your lips
I remember elderflower
But everyone since
Seems to only taste of decay

And I would offer every breath of life I've claimed
To have met you on some other day
In some other world
But here I stand
Bathed head to toe in entrails of the damned
Like strawberry wine
But it seems you're only
Diamond dust, washed out by crimson rain