

In Context

Field Music

Everyone takes their place for you
Each one accepts their little part
So many words I can't afford to give away
I was expecting such a lot

Oh you're a long way from home
All of the thoughts you had were not your own
Even the time you came was somebody else's time
But you're alive between the lines

Did you know that I would have done
Before you say anything
And you take away the context
And our lives weren't the same since

The points start to give away
Compounding errors again and again
See mistakes we made and wouldn't change
I was expecting a change
I was expecting a change
I was waiting for a change

I'm reminded of something I never knew
Distracted from a little taste
After I was stuck to wait for us
A breath tired of waiting for you
A breath tried and waiting for you

Did you know what it would have done
If I would've said anything
And you take away the context
And our lives weren't the same since