

From Mountain Movers To Lazy Losers

Fireworks

We're holding on, but you seem to let go.
Chasing your silhouette in those aspirations.
But you swallowed your pride and closed your eyes,
Gave into the trends, you couldn't hide.
Because you can't spell friends without the ends.
And I know that we're still young,
And we've fallen out of love.
We ran so fast with the motions and the moments.

Every sleepless night.
Reminds me of the east coast lights.
You shine so bright.
But you're burned out in my eyes.

We claimed the streets and we moved mountains.
Every landscape, every promise,
You forgot about them.

Every sleepless night.
Reminds me of the east coast lights.
You shine so bright.
But you're burned out in my eyes.

Couldn't hold on to the promise,
So I lost my faith in you.
Looked away from being honest,
And being true.

Do you remember the summer heat?
And the way, we used to be.
Dreamed about the scenery,
The place we'll never see.
This was a lost cause,
You're a lost cause.
This was your family.
And you lost the will to carry on,
So we're moving on,
Without you, now.

Live like a legend,
Die young and live forever.
But we won't die together.

Every sleepless night.
Reminds me of the east coast lights.
You shine so bright.
But you're burned out in my eyes.

Couldn't hold on to the promise,
So I lost my faith in you.
Looked away from being honest,
And being true.
