

Battle Of The Bones

Flatfoot 56

The time has come old boy for me to tell you a tale
Of a man filled with passion there's no room for him to fail
He sailed his ship the Lidy Hoo, across the seven seas
With his crew screaming at him, lead us on, sir, if you please

One day the Lidy Hoo sailed across rough waters
This sea said, "oh captain can you save your sons and daughters

The captain grabbed his mighty wheel and screamed what you got,

I'm the captain of the Lidy Hoo can you handle her or can you not?

Yo, ho, ho at the battle of bones, you sail the seven seas but you're never getting home

Well the sea answered back, old boy where have you been

I've been waiting for a fight like this since time first began

So prepare yourself, and get ready for your death ride

I'll be taking you down to Davey Jones with your cargo and your

Well they tossed and turned for 'bout an hour

The ship went around, and then she went downward

The captain reared his ugly head touché
