

Nights Become Days

Frank Turner

We soared in the dawn from the roof of the bar
When nights become days then you've gone too far We listened to songbirds and rush hour cars and welcomed in the day
Peace in London in summertime is great,
On days like this I feel like I can escape and things that I've done and mistakes that I've made.
I can wash it all away
We bathed like swimmers in the morning sun, and waiting for our night to end
We knew that one of us would come down hard and one of us would start again
We started out curious, it started out fun
We smoked in the woods when we were young
And secretly slipped something under our tongues
And danced the night away
But everyone stumbles on old cocaine
It burns up the best, and it burdens the brain
'Til brown comes and whispers away the pain and you find you've lost your way
We bathed like swimmers in the morning sun, and waited for our
night to end
We knew that one of us would come down hard and one of us would
start again
You'd sink in the river for your death
You'd sleep with the fishes, and draw no breath You'd swallow forever, till nothing's left Take no rest
Oh my friend, if you made for the shore, you'd see us here, we' re all waiting
Just cast your eyes down to the floor, you'll see us here, we'r e waiting
Don't sink in the river for your death
You can sleep in the shade, and draw some breath
You could start fresh tomorrow, and leave what's left Please draw breath, please draw breath
Let's let nights become days
So come down kid the roofs not safe now
All your friends are waiting for you to get some rest
