Grow strong
and learn to fly
Do not for an instant consider the circling death above
nor the slithering one below

Soar and bask in your youth Many and vile are the pains on your path

Blacksmith of fortune and fate, a cunning trickster, brings down the hammer with unexeeded might Mad and blind (Will you be crushed?)

Better not ponder
Follow the footprints
Do not worry,
you will always be caught
if you fall...
(...won't you?)

Half-chance is life and though the arrows missed you so far, your body remembers how to squirm, and your heart how to bleed