We always thought that there're two sites Black and white from which we chose Never have thought that this Might not be the whole truth There's no good god, no evil devil Just one god who is all No fallen angel ruling hell There is just one entity

Let's forget about black and white About the devil who is to blame In the end it is our decision We can use our free will without shame

So what shall I believe? Shall I obey or shall I go? Is there no black, is there no white? Only grey with no sites And in the end it will not matter How much white you add to grey It always was and will be grey No separate sites on which you could stay

Let's forget about black and white About the devil who is to blame In the end it is our decision We can use our free will without shame
