

You're drowning in the ocean of your fails
You apologize your inability
To stand on your own by the fictive stories
You're closing your eyes to not face the world

You find fault with those who stood by your side
And believed in you
And so many times you broke your promise
At the border of the darkest abyss, you're ready to fall

You still confide in someone else will take care (of you)
But your thoughts are rotting in your addiction
You'll be not able to keep it under control
You felt from grace, felt from grace long ago

So much you lose day by day along of selfish mind
Not thinking what you are leaving behind
No more come-off, the things have to get real names
That's the only way out of labyrinth