Wrong About You

Garth Brooks

You were right about me being lonely without you
Missing you like the way that I do
You were right about so many things
That I'm starting to think I was wrong about you

You were right about me crying all night hoping
My heart breaking in two
You were right about so many things
That I'm starting to think I was wrong about you

If I could do it all over again
I'd do it all a little differently
Slower than that
And I might be able to see
That you were right about me wanting you back again
As soon as I said we were through
You were right about so many things
That I'm starting to think I was wrong about you

If I could do it all over again
I'd do it all a little differently
Slower than that
And I might be able to see
That you were right about our hearts beating as one heart
And me not having a clue
You were right about so many things
That it makes me think that I was wrong about you
You were right about so many things
I'm starting to think I was wrong about you
