

The Hurt Is Worth The Chance

Gary Chapman

Yesterday i watched the sun rise.
Light seeped into my eyes. A vision of a broken world
Today i finally realized
I've wasted most of my life trying to make this a perfect world
And i always thought i was so free
But there was so much i couldn't see i slowly traded in my time

Another one slips into the corporate death machine
Another day we waste in a dead end job
Another chance for salvation is not gonna come
Work through the day everyday and now our lives seem gone

Yesterday they thought it was for the best.
They invested everything they had and raised the children in their mess
Today i try to reclaim the things i've lost but damage never comes without a cost i fall to my knees and scream I LOST.
Throw my hands in the air and scream out in vain.
There is no relief for the pain i've watched the world go insane.

So i dress myself for the corporate death machine
Another day i waste in my dead end job
Give up hopes for my salvation to come
Work through the day everyday and now my life seems done