

Where I Can Never Be

Gary Numan

And nothing I say, and nothing I can be
And nothing I do will ever bring you back to me.
And all that we loved, and all that we hoped for
And all that we dreamed is lost and slowly fades away.
You are still breathing, so you are where I can never be.

And all that I was, and all that I wanted
And all that I could have been is gone and turns to stone.
And I am not here, and I am not real
But I am still calling out your name to guide you home.
You are still breathing, so you are where I can never be.

Where I can never be.

Sometimes I hear you
Sometimes I see you
Sometimes I feel you
And so I die again.