Prologue

Gentle Giant

Three friends are made, three lives are laughs and tears Through years of school and play they share As time stands still the days change into years And future comes without a care.

But fate and skill and chances play their part The wind of change leaves no good-bye Three boys are men their ways have drawn apart They tell their tales to justify.