Learning How to Love You

George Harrison

While all is still in the night And silence starts its flow Become or disbelieve me Left alone with my heart Im learning how to love you

While waiting on the light How patience learned to grow Endeavor could relieve me Left alone with my heart I know that I can love you

Love you like you may have never been Move you more ways than you have seen To a point in the time where we see so much more Than the ground that we touch With each step so unsure

As teardrops cloud the sight Your eyes may never know No truth could ever fear me And left alone with my heart Im learning how to love you.

Love you like you may have never seen Move you more ways than you have been To a point in the time where we see so much more Than the ground that we touch With each step so unsure

As teardrops cloud the sight Your eyes may never know No truth could ever fear me And left alone with my heart Im learning how to love you.
