

Right Where I Am

Gino Vannelli

I have been through the fields of fire and ice
Fought the unthinkable war
Searched the world over for real happiness
From western to far eastern shore
I have crossed over mountains and valleys below
In search of a lost paradise
But I never would find what I was looking for Till I'd see with a new set of eyes

It's a Sunday walk in the park
The new light of day dawning after the dark
The sound of my new baby's cry
The bright ray of hope looking me in the eye
So much more than the will to survive
It's the glorious feeling of being alive
It's the wonder of knowing that all that I want
Is right in the palm of my hand
Cause everything's right where I am
Right where I am
Yeah right where I am

Well I promise to never desert you again
In body spirit or mind
No more will I knock upon heaven's door
Till heaven reveals it's my time
Cause I was taken by an angel who locked me away
In mansions of dark moons and mist
Only to find myself back in your arms
Seeing life for what it is

It's a Sunday walk in the park
The new light of day dawning after the dark
The sound of my new baby's cry
The bright ray of hope looking me in the eye
So much more than the will to survive
It's the glorious feeling of being alive
It's the wonder of knowing that all that I want
Is right in the palm of my hand
Cause everything's right where I am
Right where I am
Yeah right where I am
