

Something Different

Godsmack

Something wrong, something right, something missing
Something black, something light, something different
Don't you ever feel you need to speak to me that way?
Something black, something light, something different
Something wrong, something right, something missing
Don't you ever feel you need to speak to me that way?

All this noise in my head
Ringing through and echoing
Simple things just take too long, long, long
It's not like I'm not listening
But you just keep on flipping it
And maybe one day i'll be gone, gone, gone

Something wrong, something right, something missing
Something black, something light, something different
Don't you ever feel you need to speak to me that way?
Something black, something light, something different
Something wrong, something right, something missing
Don't you ever feel you need to speak to me that way?
To me that way

Try to leave the past behind me
But you just keep reminding me
And threw it in my face so wrong, wrong, wrong
I try to see things your way
But something changes every day
And every question way too long, long, long

Something wrong, something right, something missing
Something black, something light, something different
Don't you ever feel you need to speak to me that way
Something black, something light, something different
Something wrong, something right, something missing
Don't you ever feel you need to speak to me that way
To me that way, to me that way

I've been missing yesterday
Taking me so far away from where I've been gone, yeah
Making me someone I've never known

Something wrong, something right, something missing
Something black, something light, something different
Don't you ever feel you need to speak to me that way
Something black, something light, something different
Something wrong, something right, something missing
Don't you ever feel you need to speak to me that way
To me that way, to me that way
