Won't Be Coming Home

Golden Smog

He is reaching up for climbing Ropes hanging down below I see the children smiling No need to let it show

I know, I won't be coming home No more

The street in sidewalk borders Stretch out beyond the scenes The sweet and dark emotions Every day hopes and dreams

My God, I know who's waiting Beneath the bedroom floor Her eyes anticipating I'm reaching every move

I know, I won't be coming home No more

All I ever wanted
Was to turn from my side
All I ever wanted
Was to turn from my side

The rake is scratching harder
The half drawn window shade
Like any empty memory
The colors seem to fade

My God, I know who's waiting Beneath the bedroom floor Remember summer showers Outside the cabin walls

I know, I won't be coming home No more