

Fall In Two

Guster

He smiled to the world,
But his heart fell below his pain.
He wanted only arms,
But he lied to himself again.

Closing doors and locking locks,
He looked inside himself.
Only to find, deep down fear.

Oh oh let me fall in two.
Let me fall in two. Oh
Let me fall in two. ooo

Wide as a river, and spread as thin,
What he could start no one would finish.
Bottled up brown entry they saw what they were,
Knowing not nothing, he was the only son.

Closing doors and locking locks,
He looked inside himself.
Only to find, seeping from his soul. oh oh

Let me fall in two.
Let me fall in two.
Let me fall in two.

(Let me fall in two) What are you running from.
(Let me fall in two) What are you running from.
(Let me fall in two) What are you running from.
(Let me fall in two) What are you running from. oooooo

He finds himself a way.
Only to want the world to find (But he finds himself a way),
You try to leave but there is nothing he can do.

Down cast eyes,
Scrutinize,
As to what the lead ball hummingbird would not succumb.
To find what is gone you must burn what is dried,
And smell the essence of what remains inside.
But blackened thoughts,
Erase all that is past,
Before him,
Not knowing where he's coming.
So you shake him around,
And scream into his eyes,
That to drown in the water is to lie by his side.

Closing doors and locking locks,
He looked inside himself.
Only to find, seeping from his soul. oh oh

Let me fall in two.
Let me fall in two. ooo
Let me fall in two.

(Let me fall in two) What are you running from.

(Let me fall in two) What are you running from.
(Let me fall in two) What are you running from.
(Let me fall in two) What are you running from.
oooohooooohoooooooooooohoooooooooooohooooo
