

Emerald City

Hand Of Mercy

Homeward bound

A sunrise catches my eye
And for a moment you're not there
Remain forever on my shoulders
That's a weight I choose to bear

I've seen stone and wood from far and wide
That only stands in peoples dreams
There's been a temptress hand
From time to time
But in my heart of hearts
I know my true calling

Even though I'm away
I'll be home shortly
Just know that day to day
I still think of you fondly

Homeward bound

A sunrise catches my eye
And for a moment you're not there
Remain forever on my shoulders
That's a weight I choose to bear

While others feel a sickness
That eats them alive
Anticipation fills my heart
And the panic in my chest subsides

Homeward bound

While I don't get to see you
While we're apart
Across the land or the sea
You'll always be in my heart
