

Learn to Love

Harry Connick, Jr.

Lovers are dreamers and I've been walking in my sleep
When I awake I'll never take a chance that I can't keep
A thousand first times never add up to last
And I've been told a heart of gold melts away too fast

But I didn't count on you
Running into me
No I didn't count on you

I could learn to love you
I could get used to this
I could learn to love you
And the shelter of your kiss

The day's not as hard as trying to go through it alone
And in the end you can't depend on any love
But your own
Sometimes the impossible shows up undeclared
That's when the impossible
Shows you that it's possible
Maybe even beautiful
To double what you've dared

But I didn't count on you
Running into me
No I didn't count on you

I could learn to love you
I could get used to this
I could learn to love you
And the shelter of your kiss
