

I'll Come Running

Hootie & The Blowfish

It's been such a long time since I haven't seen your face
There's a tear on your cheek, where your smile used to be
'Cause I'm going away
We've had such a good time, though we knew this day might come
So when you hold me tonight, squeeze a little tighter
'Cause in the morning I'll be gone and I tell you baby now, I might be long

But I'll come running, I'll come running home
I'll come running home to you
I'll come running, I'll come running home
I'll come running home to you, you

It's already five a.m., we haven't got much sleep just yet
Sun is rising, I wish I could make time stand still
I look in your eyes now love and I don't know what to say
The words, the words aren't coming to me
I guess I find it's just so hard to say goodbye
And if you say you'll wait for me now, I know you'll try

But I'll come running and I'll come running home
I'll come running home to you, you
I will come running home, I'll never leave you alone girl
I'll always come running home to you, you, you

I'll come running, I will, I will, I will
And I will come home now always come home right to you
No matter what I will, no matter what I do
I'll always come, I'll always come running home
I'll always come running home to you

I'll come running, I'll come
I'll come running, I'll come
