

Miles Behind Me

Hotel Lights

fading out of sight, into the back of your mind all this water under the bridge everything comes sneaking back and we didn't talk after that

nobody saw you fall
nobody saw you fall
nobody saw you fall
miles behind me

things that we worried about then when patience had run thin
laughed when we wanted to hide on different sides of the line
we went to the end of the night

nobody saw you fall
nobody saw you fall
nobody saw you fall
miles behind me

familiar roads unrecognizable turns seem to be dead ends in tiny rooms out of view everything's born again and this time you're gonna win at least that's what i tell myself

nobody saw you fall
nobody saw you fall
nobody saw you fall
miles behind me

nobody saw you fall
and i don't care it's all miles behind me
