Gun Turned On The World

Howard Jones

You're walkin' 'round like a doll without a head You should be thinking 'bout how to give your love instead I've seen you lying and cheating your way Then you complain about what all of your friends say

You shoot your mouth like you damn well own the world We always have to keep our little white flags unfurled Just try to finish the things that you start Stop thinking with your fists
And start thinking with your heart

Oh can't you see
Oh what you could be now
You never listen to me
Oh you're like a gun turned on the world

Things have to be attempted one step at a time You got to take that poison from your eyes You know the lights are going out in your life Your killing yourself with your own knife

Oh can't you see
Oh what you could be now
You never listen to me
Oh you're like a gun turned on the world

You don't want a love you need a chaperone You want a first-class alibi You bore the pants off people on the telephone People are sick of your lies You better open your eyes

You're like a gun turned on the world, like a gun

You're takin' one step forward then two steps back Friendly advice gets treated like a heart attack You can drown in the shallow water of hate Get the sense before it's too late now

Oh can't you see
Oh what you could be now
You never listen to me
Oh you're like a gun turned on the world
Oh can't you see
Oh what you could be now
You never listen to me
Oh you're like a gun turned on the world
