Skin & Bones

Hurray For The Riff Raff

lay your body down lay the old dress down weary hands and feet time's mistreated you, you say you're just skin and bones these days

digging yourself an early grave lying in the mud all day i couldnt beleive that was you at the end of the road ' you were see through you can grow as high as the willow grows turn your roots from the soil to the sea the ocean floor it holds the darkest parts of you it's time that you let yourself breathe can you forget about the past is that what it meants to be free i know now that these wounds wont last some people they're just not worth the grief
