Wish

At the Piccadilly station I felt my heartbeat racing I didn't know no better And on that Camberwell Road I found a mirror for my soul And I didn't need no other

I was accident prone I fell head over heels with no warning And in spite of my vertigo I never felt myself falling

And I wish, I wish That I told you then what I realise now And I wish, I wish That I told you when you were still around

That night in Whitechapel girl I know what should have happened I just left you standing there Meanwhile I became a man from New York City to Japan But that don't give me satisfaction, yeah

We're only victims of timing And on that cold summer night I know I'm a fool for not trying

And I wish, I wish That I told you then what I realise now And I wish, I wish That I told you when you were still around

I wish that I could rewrite all the things That we both let go And I wish that I could just Turn back the time and tell you

I wish, I wish That I told you then what I realise now And I wish

I wish, I wish That I told you then what I realise now And I wish, I wish That I told you when you were still around
