

I curse your name,
I curse the earth you travelled With a heart so serrated it draws lacerations across the hands You used to hold so tightly up until now I'm glad farewells were exchanged before today

This phrase has never sounded so sweet to my ears I don't mourn this act or mourn for you, I mourn for you and with those encounters still installed in my mind I leave with a putrid taste inside my mouth every living thing on this earth dies alone, dies alone this phrase never sounded so sweet to my ears
every living thing on this earth dies alone, dies alone
this phrase never sounded so sweet to my ears with reason enough to curse the earth you walk from those final encounters stuck, stuck in my mind the scent of abhorrence still lingers part your exit this moment is only married by thoughts of your presence

I curse your name and the earth you're walking on

Every living thing on this earth dies alone...
Every living thing on this earth dies alone...
Every living thing on this earth dies alone...
Every living thing on this earth dies alone...

These scornful thoughts resurrect to the sound of that name.
the scent of abhorrence still lingers here to look at those lacerations with no chance to heal, no chance to, heal these scornful thoughts linger on these scornful thoughts linger on these scornful thoughts linger on [fade out]