

A sudden stop and then I woke up
With vertigo in the wrong place
Everybody back home laughing
There goes one more throw away... always alone

I imagine when they turned it on
They said farewell

When I said I'd volunteer
I thought it might be a good thing
To enlighten in a time-bend
Away from warm bed, homeless, hoping and up

I imagine when they turned it on
They forgot to warn me there's no comedown

When you're on your own looking for changes
While the fate swing takes control
While your head spins you can't see it coming
While you fall into your calling
One man alone
Infinity machine

Hold my head
Hold my hand
Hold my breath and now...

Always running from the sun
Always a need for recovery
Never happy in a stand still
Never listened to bullshit
Broken or whole
