

Still the Same

Ian Hunter

They say that some people never grow up
Lost in time, shackled to the past for ever, stung by love
Still weaving, still believing yesterday's dreams
If life is real then so is my imagination
All I feel is who I am? Who I am? Who I am?
And if I wished so hard I bled, would you come true?
All I need's a bottle and the memories come flooding back
And I see you though the rain, through the rain, through the rain in
They say you can never go back
What if my love's still the same?
Still the same, still the same, still the same
Still the same, still the same
When love goes right, it's the ultimate high you can be on Oh, baby, I've lost count of the times when things went wrong
Bit I pick myself up and I carry on, on, and on, and on, and on
And on, and on it goes
I can't pretend imaginary friends are better
All I know is people change, people change, people change
They say I'm supposed to forget and go on What if my love's still the same? Still the same
Still the same, still the same, still the same
Still the same, still the same, still the same
Still the same, still the same, still the same
(Oh, baby, now)
What if your love, what if your love is still the same
What if your love, what if your love is still the same
What if your love, what if your love is still the same
What if your love, what if your love is still the same
What if your love, what if your love is still the same
