Oh Winter Morning

A fall immaculate, like the frozen tears of a broken god She thought they were all hers alone Sure there is no more warmth inside She went outside to feel the wind Nature showed off her finest today So beautiful is her white gown Everything else just fades away

[Chorus] Oh Winter morning Steal her heart and freeze it within your hand Oh Winter morning She is your princess unborn Unaware of the tempest raging Oh Winter morning Bury her under the snows And prepare for the coming storm

The Sun being no cheer at all Pale, livid, empty just like her The day is dull and grey She feels safe before this mirror Sadly she can't evade the scars A wound so far from healing Beware, such a cold glass heart is at a drop from shattering

One with the snow deep She whispers a last sigh From her frozen heart denied Lost to a world asleep

[Chorus] Oh Winter morning Steal her heart and freeze it within your hand Oh Winter morning She is your princess unborn Unaware of the tempest raging Oh Winter morning Bury her under the snows And prepare for the coming storm
