

Omnio bardo

In The Woods...

These eyes, did I die behind these cold blue eyes? Did I know where to go?
This light, eclipsed in a worn disguise did glow even though my cries were driven by those echoed lies No where to roam Open my eyes, enlightened the child that whispered bardo omnio

Let me belong, eat my raw, stick me empty with your hungry claws-bring me light can you feel the tension burning?
The soundtrack of our lives, on an early April morning, may be able to re-define the standards of this restless emptiness...

Carved out of velvet, draped in truth
-to reach omnio
Let me be strong, let me draw all the lines that fall upon the floor-bring me life let me feel electric tension I am greater, taller and a thousand times smaller
From a ghost that told you where to go to a piece of flesh that need to know And as I turned my fragile skin
-I reached omnio

I have gathered bricks throughout a lifetime to build a house where I will live
The door is where I write these words
-the window where I forgive Restlessly I searched the hallway for the truth of yesterday But changes cast their ugly shadows
-the basement is there host today is this the omnio

I have been searching for?
