The Agony Within

Inborn Suffering

The end is close.... I've did all to avoid Nevertheless, we must accept our fate In fathomless depths passion was agonizing

From accomplice to stranger Tiredness replaced the pondering From desire to anger the pain inside I saw

I regret the day that we paid by the flesh Shall thy punishment be less than mine Nothing worse than a life to suffer in....

A distance separated our past And now that you are there, radiant sin The only hope I can trust in (remains) The promised end of the agony within Faded silent jail, with grace Consumed to grey out dying days

As you said, my bride, it's forever Behind the vain pray, I have lost my soul Blood droplets, flowing tears of your broken dream Secret will remain our entwined misery Solitude, blinded lies as dusk for eternity

I regret the day that we paid by the flesh Shall thy punishment be less than mine Nothing worse than a life to suffer in....

Here we lay together lifeless, inside agonizing here we stand together blasted, bleeding within

As a dismal epilogue for our funeral idyll Where blinding light turned to ethereal mist Scattering distress where love was my disease Remains a life to suffer in... the agony within...
