In the Halls of Awaiting

Insomnium

Evening full of grandeur
Skies tinged with red
Mountains crowned with crimson
Treetops with scarlet blaze
As the dusk is falling, night settles in
Stars slowly come out
Moon glides skywards
...Still cheerless is in my soul
My heart filled with cares...

Longing for the misty shores
Weather-beaten strands so poor
Where the weeping sky archs over water calm
Pining for primeval woods
Murky shade of leafy roof
Where the silent trees arch over our path

Do you walk in mourning, still wear the grief Raiment of sorrow, remembrance of me Through the years of bleakness Winters of bitter cold Will you not forget me, forsake my soul ...Low-spirited is my song Downhearted my tune...

Beyond enchanted sea, wistful is my sleep Darkness by my side, through the dreary night Will you follow me, through eternity To another world, to the quiet halls

I've lost my way in the dark Strayed apart from my love I've faced the demons of might Passed away into shades

Long are lonely years, slowly pass these days In undying land, in the divine light Where I wait...in the dark

The black of the night turns to dusk of the dawn
Through the mist now shines the fairest light of all
The caress I've waited for eternity
Into the shades, together we fade
