Garden of Light

I fell asleep in a world dressed in grey Only to awake in a garden divine There was song and dance and untarnished flesh A feast for the body and eyes It was you who brought me here Yours, whose face greeted me, in the garden of light You are the face of god You are my breath My life, my death