

A Thing Called Rain

Jackie Greene

I think I'll quit my job today, Spend the money that I saved I think I'll build a boat for me And sail myself across the sea Cause' every night the sun goes down And the morning helps me come around The coffee likes to chase the booze The booze it likes to chase the blues

I kept your picture in a frame I kept your heart out on a chain But hearts don't belong on chains And pictures don't belong in frames People come and people go Foe to friend and friend to foe And you do just what yer supposed to do Cause the clock don't ever stop for you she thinks she knows me oh so well for six nights in a cheap motel, she gave her heart away for free she gave it all away to me but im needle dancin' on a pin match under my heels again not every bird will sing for you don't matter how you ask her to can't believe the way she acts she doesn't even know the facts but ain't that just the way it goes when you're telling truth in liars clothes born and raised and born again and I can't tell you why or when but everything will happen twice sure as fire, sure as ice so it's broken hearts and dusty roads and somewhere there my soul explodes with every piece of every day and everything I meant to say and where I'll be, no one can tell I'm fishing in a wishing well and i'm doing the very best I can I just hope you'll understand now I seen all the lights that shine countless colors in my mind they climb and swim and spark and glow and ask me what it is I know I know a thing called love a thing called thunder in the sky above now I know a thing called pain now I know a thing called rain
