With every little word that you say I can see you slipping away And everybody's coming closer Telling me that this is over And I can see you slipping away

But I've seen angels turn into sinners
And I've seen summers turn into winters
Singing
Please, take me home tonight
Singing, singing
Please, take me home tonight

With every little thing that you do Another little lie that comes true And everything I know is deluded You make me feel like I'm secluded And I can see you slipping away

But I've seen angels turn into sinners
And I've seen summers turn into winters
Singing
Please, take me home tonight
Singing, singing
Please, take me home tonight

Home, home, home Home, home, home

With every little thing that I hear Another thing that I come to fear You used to be so pretty, baby And now I barely know you lately And I can see you slipping away

Singing
Please, take me home tonight
I'm singing, singing
Please, oh, won't you take me home tonight?
Please, take me home tonight
Singing, singing
Please, please, take me home tonight
