Fast As I Can

James McMurtry

He was a drinking man with a guitar problem Didn't have a dollar to his name
He didn't seem to mind it all that often
He mostly took whatever came

And if it came too late or it came to nothing He'd swear beneath his breath There's gotta be something to it There's gotta be something to it

She lost her mind and she never missed it Folks all said she'd never learn
She'd take the path of least resistance
Right to the point of no return

Apprehended on occasion, got off easy every time Said there's gotta be something to it, something to it Don't know why else She want to put herself through it

When your nights are getting colder Restless as the wind I'll be coming over Fast as I can, fast as I can

Well, he had some lines but he never used 'em She didn't need much talking to And he thought he'd died and gone to Houston By the time the dawn burned off the dew

And they lit right up like Roman candles Like fire and gasoline There must've been something to it, something to it Didn't mess around, they just had to get right to it

When your nights are getting colder Restless as the wind I'll be coming over Fast as I can, fast as I can

For a while they carried on like rabbits
They'd disappear for days and nights
You might say they learned each other's habits
You might say that became their life

And life wasn't long, life wasn't easy Life wasn't cheap, life wasn't fair And there might have been something to it There might have been something to it

When your nights are getting colder Restless as the wind I'll be coming over Fast as I can, fast as I can

When your nights are getting colder Restless as the wind

I'll be coming over Fast as I can, fast as I can
