

Stumble

Jandek

I don't have everything you want
I sit in the chair and stop existence
Why should I be something I'm not
I refuse to be afraid
The chance I took multiplied forever
I'm tripping over time and place
One stumble leads to another
And I no longer break my bones
I just don't get that physical
I'll break my neurological patterns
On my random walk and talk
I don't need my legs and words
I flipped into another world
Where I can use all the things around me
To make a castle in the sand
Silicon days ablaze
I'll let light bouncing off these glassy stones
Come in, come in, come in, come in
All you light in your passageway
You'll bypass through my molecules
The in-between part is your home
You make me feel so radiant
Maybe your channels will accept me
And I can shine and blind all being
Why don't it take a walk with you
Stop and stumble and fall on through
